Formula 1 came to Singapore for the first time in 2008. But Messe Düsseldorf even quicker off the mark! We realised some time ago that Southeast Asia had market potential. And that’s why we were in pole position in Singapore 13 years earlier. Our strong team has been here lap after lap, making contacts, organising trade fairs, bringing markets and people together, and expanding our network. Thanks to these activities, today we are thought of as one of the best trade fair organisers anywhere in Southeast Asia. We are the one with the best connections. In Singapore there’s a special word for this: guanxi.

So why do we do it? Because it is our job to put our clients in pole position in their markets – anywhere in the world – and that is at the Basis for Business. We ensure that they are ahead of the competition where it matters – on the home straight.

Gernot Ringling
Managing Director, Messe Düsseldorf Asia
In recent years the economic development in Southeast Asia has been something of a phenomenon. Some of the world’s fastest-growing national economies have contributed to this – on a scale that is unsurpassed anywhere.

Messe Düsseldorf Asia has been active in this region since 1995. From our base in Singapore, we have played our part in the economic development of Southeast Asia with our trade fair brands – from Singapore through Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam to Indonesia. We are convinced that the true potential of this region is only now beginning to unfold. As both market and production location, Southeast Asia offers immense opportunities for companies from around the world.

Our Messe Düsseldorf Asia team has twenty years of experience with which to support its clients as they establish and broaden their market presence in Southeast Asia. As a company our strengths lie in our ability to conceive, organise and stage trade fairs. We have sensitively adapted these skills so that they are well suited to the cultural environment of Southeast Asia, enabling us to build relations with our partners and clients over the years on their home turf, so to speak. We know that regional trade fairs are the fastest and most effective route into Southeast Asian markets.

And we have built a good reputation here. By applying ourselves intensively to fostering contacts, focusing on clients’ wishes and needs and maintaining our high quality standards everywhere from Singapore to Bangkok, we have become one of the most sought-after trade fair organisers in the entire region – for local and international businesses.
Ten nations. More than 600 million people. At the centre – Singapore, our Asian head office. Immediate neighbours are Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam. All with fantastic potential, both in resources and production capacity. With attractive opportunities for manufacturers and trading enterprises. Messe Düsseldorf Asia can open the door to these markets for you. Now is the right time to commit to this region – and to benefit from one of the most dynamic markets in the world.
Common cause. The region is working towards a common cause – the creation of a single domestic market in which economic growth is promoted sustainably, with the aim of integrating the national economies of ASEAN countries into a single market for goods, services, investments and professionals. From 2015 the ASEAN Economic Community will drive development throughout this economic region further still. Member states will play a larger and more important role in the global value chain that will further enhance their competitiveness.

For companies active in Southeast Asian markets new opportunities are springing up. Income per capita is on the rise and is bringing increasing purchasing power to regional markets – a demand that can be met by innovative products and services. The region as a whole offers superb conditions for manufacture and trade and will continue to play an important role in supplying the world markets with high grade end products.

No business strategy should overlook such lasting potential for development. Asia’s importance in the global marketplace is growing steadily – both as a manufacturing location and as a market in itself. It’s a good thing that we are already there for you.
A city state that has become a paragon of economic growth: Singapore. A nation on 17,500 islands: Indonesia. A pioneer in the fusion of modern lifestyles with Asiatic culture: Thailand. And a country whose younger generation has made immense efforts to bring it up to speed with its economically powerful neighbours: Vietnam.

Yet for all their differences, their objectives are strikingly similar. Markets are being developed systematically. The resource potential is being tapped. Major investments are being made in infrastructure.

At the heart of world affairs: Thanks to free trade agreements with China, India, Australia, Japan, New Zealand and South Korea, a free-trade zone has been created that spans half the globe.

It is telling that a city state such as Singapore, with an area of 712 square kilometres – smaller than Berlin – occupies 37th place in the global rankings for gross domestic product. Few people are aware that the largest gold mine in the world is in Indonesia, or that Vietnam is the world’s fifth-largest exporter of clothing, and that Thailand is currently investing €1 billion in wind energy.

As a region, the ASEAN countries are jointly in seventh place in the world GDP rankings. That’s a truly strong position. And reason enough for any business to pay more attention to the region and the opportunities it has to offer!
FORWARD THINKING

There’s a lot going on. Demand is increasing. We’re watching the Asian markets closely. And the information we gather enables us to think and act with foresight, and exploit market opportunities to the full. This is just one of the major strengths of the Messe Düsseldorf Group. These considerations first brought us to Singapore in 1995. Our objective: To create closer relationships between international exhibitors and South-east Asian buyers.
From Singapore, we have linked our network to trade fair locations in Southeast Asia. We have been quick to realise the importance of personal contacts and meeting face to face.

The benefit for market leaders. It’s a fact: The Messe Düsseldorf Group’s product spectrum, with its five areas of expertise and over 20 leading trade fairs in its portfolio, has done much to foster trust in the potential of this region. And those that set the pace in plastics and rubber, printing and packaging, wire and cables, tubes, health and medicine or occupational health and safety may be sure that their ambitions can be just as effectively realised in Bangkok or Jakarta.

To this end, Messe Düsseldorf Asia focuses on a trusted strategy, i.e. concentration on our core competences. We make sure that our events are organised with a degree of professionalism that equals the best in the world. Comprehensive service of the highest international level is standard. And we work closely together with our colleagues of the Messe Düsseldorf Asia Group and with our partners in governments, trade and professional associations and industry.

It’s all been worthwhile. This is a phrase we love to hear – from both exhibitors and visitors alike. It encapsulates the feeling we want to engender at our trade fairs. Contacts between suppliers and buyers are forged. A forum for transferring know-how and exchanging ideas is created. Foundations for establishing lasting business relationships are laid down, because this is where people meet people. We call it the Basis for Business. People understand that everywhere. Southeast Asia is no exception.

Our golden rule at Messe Düsseldorf: We are focused on the needs of the market. In Southeast Asia we concentrate on two core sectors which interest the region’s industries the most when it comes to knowledge transfer and the greatest growth potential. What is fuelling the tiger economies at the moment? Modernisation in machine tools and plant construction, as well as the progressive field of medical technology. Our core competence: Trade fair brands that add dynamism to the markets of Southeast Asia. Good for growth.

Comprehensive information on our five areas of expertise can be found at www.messe-duesseldorf.com
In just a few years PACK PRINT INTERNATIONAL has grown into the largest specialist trade fair of its kind in Southeast Asia – thanks in no small part to its close cooperation with The Thai Packaging Association and The Thai Printing Association.

INDOPRINT 2012 translated the success concept of our leading trade fairs firmly into the printing industry. International exhibitors presented advanced technological solutions and recognised in Jakarta a regional market with significant growth potential.

Parallel to INDOPRINT, INDOPACK is another major point of attraction for the print industry. Here, specialists in the packaging sector offer an impressive demonstration of their innovative technological solutions.
The production and sales of drinks in Thailand are booming. With the introduction of Bevtec Asia in 2015 Messe Düsseldorf Asia offers the rapidly growing Thai drinks manufacturing market a new platform for exchanging technological and production know-how. The fair is designed in cooperation with Asian Exhibition Services and with support from the drinks industry in Thailand.

Springboard into the Indonesian steel industry: Indometal was introduced in 2013 as a specialist event and is the platform for B2B contacts with sector decision-makers in Southeast Asia.
T-PLAS is the specialist fair in the largest and strategically most important manufacturing market of the region, Thailand. It therefore has major international appeal: More than 200 exhibitors from over 20 countries will show at T-PLAS, which in 2015 will be held in parallel with PACK PRINT INTERNATIONAL.

A booming consumer goods industry has encouraged the development of a strong plastics sector and makes Indonesia the ideal location for INDOPLAS. Exhibitors here benefit from constantly increasing demand in the plastics production and petrochemicals sectors.

The growth figures for Plastics & Rubber Vietnam reflect the dynamism of the sector in this country. More than 150 international exhibitors come face to face with 7500 trade visitors from 24 countries: our high-profile trade fair concept is also a success in Vietnam.
The most important trade fair for manufacturers and downstream users in the industry in the Southeast Asia region – Tube is the ideal platform for marketing the latest machine tools and plant, new technologies and solutions for the production of tubes and pipes.

Everyone in business in ASEAN countries today benefits from a shared vision that has become economic reality. The common aim: A prospering economy, social progress and political stability.
The origins of economic cooperation in Southeast Asia go back to the 1960s. At that time the objective was to create a free trade zone and thereby strengthen the position of member states in their markets worldwide. Today ASEAN countries are firmly established in the global economy. The ten member states benefit from free trade within the ASEAN Free Trade Area and about a quarter of their business is with their neighbours. Almost 600 million people are profiting from the economic growth of the region and are consumers in a domestic market that is larger than the European Union.

Values create values When the Messe Düsseldorf Group started doing business in Southeast Asia, one skill was sought after in particular – the cultivation of business relationships. There is a special word for this locally: ‘guanxi’, meaning mutually beneficial relationships – a traditional value that defines business life. We have generated trust and created just such relationships. Meanwhile our business partners have come to know us as a partner that sees cooperation as a long-term commitment.

This enables the Messe Düsseldorf Asia team to support its clients with its extensive know-how and understanding of the cultural differences that exist in the various markets of this highly diverse region today.

Southeast Asia has become a magnet for foreign investors. In 2012 alone, US$107,062 million flowed into the region in the form of direct investments – a clear indication of the enormous opportunities that are latent in the further development of Southeast Asia. Wherever new market opportunities are opening up, Messe Düsseldorf Asia is right there. Trust our experience, and the values we have developed over many years: guanxi.
A metropolis with much to recommend it, both economically and architecturally. This tropical city state with almost 5.4 million inhabitants is a melting pot of cultures and languages – a fine example of successful migration. It is also a financial centre with enormous economic power extending across the entire region.

Singapore, location of Messe Düsseldorf Asia, is the perfect example of the standard of development now widespread throughout ASEAN countries. The city state offers businesses and trade fair organisers ideal conditions and a superb infrastructure. Over 60 airlines frequent Singapore airport. Its port features one of the world's largest container handling facilities. No wonder that this city state has attracted over 7000 international companies that profit from its strategic position. Singapore is both the centre of and the gateway to Southeast Asia.
Boomtown 1: Bangkok, Thailand’s capital, is a capital city in every respect. More than 14 million people inhabit its metropolitan area and it is a transport interchange through which some 90% of all foreign trade passes. It attracts visitors from all over the world who come to Bangkok to enjoy Asiatic hospitality.

With its top-class infrastructure and pro-business policy the Thai government has created the foundations for intensive international trade activity and long term investments. Bangkok is the political, economic and cultural centre of Thailand.

69 million people in Thailand represent a growing domestic market with strong indigenous demand for consumer goods. For companies with an international outlook, Bangkok is the gateway to the markets in Indochina. In the industrial sector the country’s strengths lie in the fields of electronics, the automotive industry, the food packaging industry and health & medicine, which is becoming ever more important.
Boomtown 2: Jakarta is the capital of the largest national economy in Southeast Asia: Indonesia. More than ten percent of the population, some 28 million people, live in its metropolitan area alone. Economic signs are auspicious; experts predict that by 2030 Indonesia will be the seventh-largest national economy in the world. With 240 million inhabitants living on more than 17,000 islands, Indonesia is the fourth largest country in the world.

Robust macroeconomic conditions, strong domestic demand, generous raw material resources and the most advanced measures for improving the business infrastructure make Indonesia an economy whose prospects for growth in the coming years are second to none. Growing investments from all over the world, demand for living space and tourism have all stimulated a boom in construction throughout the country. This has resulted in new jobs being created in the fast growing sectors of the economy and propelled the country’s development forward.

Boomtown 3: Ho Chi Minh City (HCMC) – sometimes still referred to as Saigon – is Vietnam’s largest city with roughly 7.1 million inhabitants. Its abbreviation HCMC stands for the industrial centre of the country and the most important transport hub in the south. A country with almost 89 million inhabitants now undergoing dynamic development: 70% of the population is under 30 years old, and this is where a new middle class is emerging with steadily rising incomes. One of the drivers of economic development here is private consumption. This is the decisive factor in overall demand; in 2012 it accounted for roughly 65% of Vietnamese GDP.

Vietnam has one of the world’s highest rates of urbanisation. By 2030 almost half of all Vietnamese will be living in cities. Since Vietnam joined the WTO in 2007 its market has gradually opened, leading to the creation of mutual international trade, while trade barriers have to a large extent been removed. Vietnam’s mood of optimism in figures: between 1988 and 2013, the Ministry for Planning and Investments (MPI) authorised exactly 15,298 foreign investment projects worth some US$223 billion – investments in the steady growth and competitiveness of Vietnamese enterprise.
